THE NAPOLEON COLLECTION OF

WILLIAM J. LATTA

To the modern collector, as well as to the student of history and the man of affairs, the name and career of Napoleon are and always will be pre-eminent. Large collections relating to Napoleon and his times have been made in recent years both in this country and abroad, but that of Mr. William J. Latta of Philadelphia stands unequalled. It has been declared by authorities familiar with the great collections of France and other countries to be "the finest in the world." The following is a quotation from a letter of appreciation from an eminent French Bibliophile to a friend who had secured him an introduction to Mr. Latta:

> "Allow me to thank you for the great pleasure you procured me in letting me see Mr. Latta's collection, which is doubtless the most important in the world—and I think I know all the Napoleon Collections of our Continent. If those known as the most complete, as M. Masson's, Prince Victor's and Prince Essling's, include perhaps a greater number of pieces, they do not—by far—contain so many First Class Portraits and particularly all in so fine condition or First States. Not less was I surprised to find in this country such a marvellous series of Caricatures, which also is unique of its kind, and there are many that I never saw. The collection of caricatures of Grand-duke Michael Nikolaievitch, reputed as one of the most important, did not even contain five hundred pieces.
> "But what I admire the most in Mr. Latta's Collection is the skill and intelligence with which such a splendid 'ensemble' has been compiled piece by piece; that is a talent that not all collectors possess and certainly few in such a high degree. One feels that Mr. Latta lives with Napoleon and his History since a long time.

Such is the estimate of the collection held by a French Connoisseur, and it is impossible in a necessarily brief introduction to mention more than a few of the rarities gathered by Mr. Latta during the last twenty-five years. Not only does the Collection excel in material relating primarily to Napoleon I., but the unsettled period that gave Napoleon his opportunity has not been neglected. In this division alone are historical documents of extreme importance and some remarkable portraits. For instance, the letter of Charlotte Corday written on the morning she left her father's house to assassinate Marat; the check-list used by Fouquier-Tinville at the scaffold, with the name of the victims scored through as each head fell successively into the basket; important letters of Desmoulins, Marat, Danton, Robespierre, and other notorious members of the "Mountain"; as well as those of their most noted victims, Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette, Lavoisier, and Madame Roland.

The portraits, views, caricatures, and battle scenes relating to Napoleon number many thousands, and it is scarcely necessary to dwell upon many prints so rare that they have never before been offered for public sale in this country, beginning with the early curious fictitious portraits issued before his features were well known; the superb lithographs of Raffet, Charlet, and the Men of 1830, their original water-color drawings of Napoleon, and other contemporary portraits which have not since been equalled in execution or in the display of the romantic sentiment inseparably connected in so many minds with the Napoleonic Era.

The letters and historical documents of the Napoleonic Period comprise those of Napoleon himself beginning when he was only a Lieutenant of Artillery in 1794 and continuing throughout his military career and his captivity in Saint Helena. Among these is the original draft of his farewell speech to the "Old Guard" on his Abdication at Fontainebleau—a document that is perhaps unequalled in its relation to the Great Emperor. The civil marriage certificate of Napoleon and Josephine is of intense interest, as every reader of Napoleon knows his marriage had a considerable bearing on his rise in power. Letters of Napoleon's family, marshals, generals, as well as his adversaries, are found in the collection, and it should be sufficient to note that there are letters of Wellington, Nelson, and Lady Hamilton, Blücher, Bernadotte, Moreau, Pitt and Alexander I of Russia, among many others to convey an adequate idea of the extent and importance of the Autograph Collection.

In forming such a collection relating to French History of Napoleon interest, other documents or portraits will naturally be collected not strictly confined to the particular period of interest, and thus Mr. Latta will be found to have secured letters of Richelieu; the Great Condé; Anne de Montmorency, Constable of France in the XVIth Century; the great financier of Louis XIV, Marquis de Louvois; the famous victim of the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, Gaspard de Colligny; Anne of Austria, Catherine de Medicis, and other equally famous names among the makers of French History.

The Caricatures form almost a complete political history of Napoleon as evidenced by the clever pencils of Rowlandson, Cruikshank, Gillray, and their contemporaries in England, France, Germany, and other nations. The medals in gold, silver, and copper are an important division of Mr. Latta's collection, and they are supplemented by a small but exquisite selection of snuff boxes and miniatures.

The Library, which contains volumes belonging to Napoleon, Josephine, and Marie Louise, is fully described in the following pages; likewise the bronze statues and plaques of Napoleon which include examples of the work of Barye, Boizot, and other artists, with a representative selection from the Prints and Autographs—the former including many rare engravings printed in color, proofs before letters and early states.

The above very brief summary refers to a number of important items which do not appear in the first Catalogue, as Part I contains only an important selection from the Prints and Autographs, with a few Caricatures. It is proposed to issue additional catalogues describing these divisions of the collection with the Medals, Miniatures, and Snuff-boxes.

641. NAPOLEON. Manuscrit de L'Ile d'Elbe. Des Bourbons en 1815. Publié par le Comte*. 8vo, old half calf. Dusseldorf, 1819

* On the title-page is an inscription "Pour mon frère Louis," signed with an initial, which looks like a J. A former owner has written a note to state that the book is from the library of the King of Holland, and another note intimates that the inscription is by Napoleon. The latter is incorrect, but the writing bears a strong resemblance to that of Jerome Bonaparte, and is probably his.

642. NAPOLEON. Vie de Napoléon. Rédigée par une Société de gens de lettres sur les nouveaux documens dictés et corrigés à Ste Hélène, par Napoleon lui même. Ouvrage orné de planches lithographiées d'après les premiers peintres, par Madou. 2 vols. in 1, oblong 4to, half blue morocco gilt, gilt top.
